

The Flip apps have been retired, but you can still use the Flip camera in Microsoft Teams for Education.

For nearly 12 years, amazing educators welcomed Flipgrid and then Flip into their classrooms to empower student voice, creativity, and self-expression. We're forever grateful for the millions of students and educators who were part of Flip's story.

While Flip apps have now been retired, educators and students can still use the Flip camera inside Microsoft Teams for Education. Please note that any existing videos can no longer be retrieved. Here's how:

1. Visit Microsoft Teams for Education. Click "Sign up for Free," and enter your school email address to get your free version of Microsoft Teams for Education.
2. Launch Teams for Education and set up your class. Create a New Assignment, choose the "New" button, and then select Flip video recording.
3. Record a video assignment to send to your students and get their responses all using the familiar Flip camera! You can also set up a Flip sharing space in Microsoft Teams for Education for your students: Create a Flip sharing space.

Thank you again, from the bottom of our hearts, for all the great ideas, support, and passion you've shown for Flip and for all that you do each day to empower future generations. While it's incredibly hard to say goodbye to our Flip apps, this community has meant the world to us. There are exciting new possibilities on the horizon for educators and students, and we look forward to what the future holds! Explore more at Microsoft Education!
